

Jesús Rosado

Factoring emotions in agent based models for crowd behavior

We propose several variations of a model for crowd behavior that takes into account the spreading of some emotion among its members and how this may alter their response. We study the relevance of this new trait by means of numerical simulations in a general case and derive and analyze the continuum governing equations of the model at the mesoscopic and macroscopic levels for some particular cases.